AJA Reactivates Security Committee

AJA president Bonnie Sudderth announced that she is reactivating the Court Security Committee for the ensuing 2001–2002 year. AJA second vice-president Gayle Nachtigal will cochair the committee, along with another person to be named by President Sudderth.

The major task of the committee will be to prepare a publication about security for judges, their families, their staffs, and their courthouses. It will be an informative and practical article that will be published and posted on the AJA Web site. The committee will meet via telephone conferences at various times throughout the year and at the midyear and annual meetings in person.

President Sudderth urges anyone who is interested in this subject to contact Shelley Rockwell at the National Center for State Courts to let her know that they want to serve on the committee or work on this project. You may contact Shelly Rockwell by phone at (757) 259-1841, by e-mail at srockwell@ncsc.dni.us, or by mail at the National Center for State Courts, P.O.
